

- The Singleton Pattern with `ApiService` was used to centralize access to the API.
- This pattern ensures that only one instance manages the requests.
- By enforcing singleton behavior, the implementation provides efficient, authenticated access to data.
- The pattern is useful for managing resources and centralizing configuration in applications.
- It is especially useful when working with a single data source like an API.

